Edward discovered at the beginning of his 30-year career as a personalized manufacturer that the most reliable way to ensure that his customers would like the feeling of a new tool was to precisely copy an existing neck that the player preferred. Check my shop for more quality models! I have over 500 positive eBay feedback and over 300 positive reviews for models. They are built from 1/2 "MDF and CNC'D by accuracy. The actual dimensions of each model may vary due to the width of the neck or the number of strings. Legend: from left to right: ä ä r = 12'- ray The nut keyboard in thumbs, ä ä r = 14- Ray the keyboard on the last keyboard in inches, ä 2.25- The keyboard width at the last thumb button, ä ä S1.776- The model number And also the width of the keyboard on the nut in thumbs, '25.4 "scala- is the scale of the guitar from walnut to the saddle without compensation, ä ä #10 .933- The thickness of the tenth inch button, ä ä & Bä ä - It is a reference to the acute and low side Neck, ä ä #1 .860- The thickness of the neck on the first thumb button. It is important to note that each of these models documents a real neck. And so so to the manufacturing inconsistencies, they can not exactly match other tools of that manufacturer. The creator and year of the tool can be found in the following table. Some necks are asymmetrical, either by will or by accident, and these asymmetries are indicated with B on the lower side and T on the treble side. In the case of mandolins or 12 spacing string guitars are almost always asymmetric to the nut and sometimes to the bridge and so the low and high sides are equally indicated. They can also be used to recreate a single element for a specific tool (for example, make a new dado or a bridge for an old Gibson mandolin). * The cuttings for the nut and the last fret are made very slightly oversize so that the model can be more easily positioned to control the radius of the keyboard and the spacing of the string. For real size see numbers . It is possible to center the string that ranges to the nut or, if you prefer, to move on one side or on the other as it is sometimes done. The most important measure here is the width of the first to last string. That's an idea. Also note that the string lines for the guitars are mathematically perfect center to center even if the existing tools were slightly off. This was the most commonly used system on older tools. If you prefer to use the most modern system taking into account the string diameters you may want to use something like the Stewart MacDonald string spacing rule (part #0673). The string lines for mandolins and 12 rope guitars were taken directly from existing instruments and as such often take into account the diameter of the string. They may or may not be mathematically perfect. These items must be returned to us the transport paid in the original packaging and in a saleable condition CONIN 14of original receipt.
